

Attention Elevators, Seed Cleaners and Farmers

If you sell, trade, or even clean seed for sale of a protected variety without the express permission or authorization of the owner, you are liable to be penalized. Recently, a grain elevator in Kansas was detected selling seed of protected wheat varieties without authorization from the owners. This cost them $50,000 to settle the claims.

The Plant Variety Protection Act (PVPA) allows for the recovery of all legal costs plus triple damages from those found guilty.

Don't expose yourself to the risk of a trial in Federal Court!
