

Dr. Atucha is an assistant professor in the Horticulture & Landscape Architecture Department at Colorado State University, and the fruit crop specialist at Western Colorado Research Center. She received her Ph.D. in horticulture from Cornell University in 2012, and joined Colorado State University shortly after. Her current research focuses on soilborne diseases of fruit trees, nutrient dynamics and soil health in orchards, and rootstock root dynamics under replant conditions.